

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

August 31, 2017

Contact: Ford Porter

Phone: 919-814-2100

Email: govpress@nc.gov

Gov. Cooper Takes Action to Keep Gas Available Despite Shortages Caused by Hurricane Harvey

Signs Executive Orders to Make It Easier to Get Gas to NC, Protect Consumers from Gouging

RALEIGH: In anticipation of gasoline shortages caused by Hurricane Harvey, Governor Roy Cooper issued executive orders today that will help maintain gasoline supplies for North Carolina.

"Hurricane Harvey's damage to refineries in Texas and Louisiana could ripple throughout the southeast, causing gasoline shortages and rising prices," Gov. Cooper said. "I'm taking action to make it easier to get gasoline into our state so North Carolinians who need gas can get it."

Restrictions Lifted to Help Gas Supply Flow More Easily

Today, Gov. Cooper signed Executive Order No. [X], declaring a state of emergency to temporarily waive the cap on maximum hours of service restrictions for fuel vehicles traveling in and through North Carolina. The order will help gasoline move in and through North Carolina more easily and quickly in response to delivery problems caused by Hurricane Harvey.

Comment [CS1]: Insert link to proc here.

Earlier this week, Gov. Cooper asked the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to waive certain federal regulations to keep gasoline supplies moving throughout North Carolina. The waivers were granted yesterday.

Comment [TNS2]: Link to request letter

Comment [CS3]: Link to reply letter from EPA here.

North Carolina Helps Harvey Victims

This morning, Gov. Cooper joined Department of Public Safety Secretary Erik Hooks, Raleigh Mayor Nancy McFarlane, and City of Raleigh Fire Chief John McGrath to send off members from five swift water rescue teams from Raleigh, Charlotte, Greensboro, Fayetteville, and Henderson County, who are on their way to assist with relief and rescue efforts in communities hit hard by Hurricane Harvey. In the past week, the state of North Carolina has also dispatched helicopters and dozens of additional volunteers to Texas to assist with flood rescue and relief efforts.

The Governor's Executive Order No. [X] also helps support disaster response efforts by making it easier for vehicles transporting emergency relief supplies to travel through North Carolina.

"Our thoughts and prayers are with those suffering from Harvey and its aftermath, and North Carolina is doing everything we can to help," said Governor Cooper. "This executive order will help essential supplies get to flood victims as soon as possible, while also keeping fuel flowing here in North Carolina."

Price Gouging Law Now in Effect Statewide

In a second Executive Order No. [X], Gov. Cooper declared an abnormal market disruption for gasoline in North Carolina based on the temporary shutdown of Texas fuel refineries due to Hurricane Harvey. As a result, North Carolina's price gouging law against overcharging in a time of crisis is now in effect statewide for the next 45 days. North Carolinians who spot potential gas price gouging may report it to the North Carolina Attorney General's Office at [HYPERLINK "http://www.ncdoj.gov"] or 1-877-5-NO-SCAM. [XXXXXXX].

Comment [CS4]: Insert link to proc here.

###

Comment [CS5]: Add contact information for price gouging complaint line as well as appropriate email address.